Calcutta Doctor Locates MOJO

By Wanda Aimlessly

Renowned East Indian Endocrinologist Dr. Raggedy Ann Anandi announced Thursday at a United Nation's conference on Genes and Glands in the Twentieth First Century that he has isolated the MOJO in a controlled laboratory setting.

The discovery of a tiny gland behind the prostate, the Morpheal Optimum Jism Oscillator or MOJO is the result of Dr. Anandi's lifelong research in the field of human sexuality.

He backgrounded his story to me in the U.N. cafeteria over a cup of strong tea and a bowl of sweat you silly curried rice.

"I was attending graduate school at the University of Mississippi in Jackson in 1976." My roommate second semester introduced me to the blues music of Blind Lemon Concentrate. I was instantly hooked on his deep throaty voice and the wonderful slide guitar technique. Mr. Concentrate mentioned his mojo in almost every song.. He sang about his mojo working and then not working and then working very well. I listened to his recordings over and over again looking for clues to this mysterious mojo reference."

"On a flight back to India to visit my girlfriend during the summer of 1978 , I had a warm tingly feeling about seeing her after a long absence. Suddenly it hit me! I was feeling my mojo working. That is when I decided to make mojo research my life's work. Many of my colleagues have dismissed my work over the years, but I am having the last laugh now.

I asked Dr. Ann Anandi about his remarkable achievement. " Earlier this year while I was examining the CAT Scan of a young male construction worker , I made a startling discovery. I observed in the pelvic region, what appeared to be a microscopic gland in the shape of a guitar. Further investigation of this guitar shaped gland convinced me that this micro gland stimulates sexual activity in men. I had finally found the mojo!

When I asked Dr. Raggedy what this discovery might mean for the makers of Viagra, he said "Frankly I think I can put them out of business if I can find a safe effective natural method to get every Mojo working without the aid of prescription drugs. That is my goal.

The irrepressible Dr. Raggedy said he would begin working on a new project sometime next year. He said his discovery of the mojo has encouraged him to investigate the role of the Wang Dang Doodle in reproductive functions.

Whoville Support Groups:

Monday morning meeting 9:00 a.m. at the Whoville Animal Shelter for people who are trying to get over being fed up with being sick and tired of everything being so impossible.

Friday night meeting at the Whoville Town Hall for people who are financially secure enough to agonize over which car to drive to the post office. Please don't take up two parking places at the Friday night meeting, just because you don't want your seventy five thousand dollar gas guzzling sport utility vehicle dinged by a bad parking job.

The Whoville Park and Amphitheater will host Tourette's day Saturday March 30th. The public is encouraged to come and participate in this one of a kind event. Feel free to blurt out any epithets, curses, profanities or insults, that you might want to share. Take a few minutes to join us in screaming openly about car repair rip-offs, inept journalism, lawyers, the court system, school bond issues, car repair rip-offs, cretin town government administrators, poopy internet service, or car repair rip-offs. Because of a town ordinance spitting will be prohibited. See you Saturday March 30th.

The Bullsheet Family Christmas Letter Contest Winner

Gosh can it be another year has flown by!?!?!?!? Oops I meant! Those exclamation points are so pesky aren't they! Oops I mean?

Mindy, Mark, Matthew, Misty, and Mocha have really grown since last year's family update memo.

Mindy is in her third year of law school at Harvard. She's co-editor of the Harvard Law Review, editor of the yearbook, layout artist for the school paper, captain of the Men's soccer team, a mentor teaching English as a second language to Balinese children in foster care and a member of the Massachusetts' state legislature. Go figure she was elected her freshmen year.

Mark is as big as an oak. At six foot five two hundred and forty he's almost as big as little brother Matthew who's tipping the scales at two ninety and topping out at just shy of eighty three inches. Mark is in his final year at both West Point and the Naval Academy. He will graduate in June with a double major in nuclear medicine and dance. At this point he's leaning toward a career in medicine. Our Markey set a Naval Academy record for most touchdown passes thrown in a single season outing. He threw twenty-six TD passes in the Army Navy Game. He was the quarterback for both teams. The joke around our house is that Markey may have set a school record for the Midshipmen but he beat himself 182 to 12 in the annual Army Navy classic.

Matthew one of our two growing teens is really a handful, but always a joy. At just under seven feet and still busting out of shoes every six weeks Matt is the basketball phenom of highschoolom scoring a minimum of seventy five points a game. He's a straight A student, a mind boggling violinist after only two years of formal lessons, and the family handyman. Last week he fixed the lawn mower, got rid of that annoying squeak in dad's Infinity Limited Edition 2000 and discovered a way to improve the already amazing picture on our new one hundred and thirty six inch high definition television. He's building a race car in his bedroom as I write this. How will we get it down the stairs?!?!?!? I mean !!!!!!!?

Teenager two Misty Morning never ceases to amaze us. She is such a business, woman. We had to put extra phone lines in her room so she could expand her burgeoning "psychic hot line" business. According to parapsychologists at Duke University Misty is the "real deal". Look out Nostradamous here comes Misty. Misty can see things most people can't and never will. We are encouraging her to use her gift as long as she maintains her grades and continues her linguistic studies. Our Misty now speaks and writes seven languages fluently. She has just finished her first multi lingual book "A Celestine Prophecy For Teens".

Mocha our youngest is fast catching up with the pack. She excels in a variety of art forms. She plays Mozart flawlessly, creates elaborate mobiles easily as delicate and complex as any Alexander Calder piece. Recently she presented her dad our Jeffrey with a perfect copy of Van Gogh's Café Terrace Au Nuit which she must have painted in the wee hours while the rest of us were asleep. We never saw her lift a brush. Needless to say Jeffrey the family Van Gogh phile was brought to tears. Who would have thought our adopted daughter rescued from Somalia when Jeffrey was serving as an officer in the reserves, would possess such extraordinary skills!!! I mean?????????

As for Jeff and I and I. Life is status quo, OUR VERSION. Jeff is gorgeous, loving respectful, fights me for the privilege of doing the dishes, always leaves the toilet seat down and is Houdini in bed. He's stepping down from his corporate perch at Enron*. Not to worry, his parachute package was ooo! la la!. Jeffrey will take on the top job at Mindless Technologies We're looking at another retreat home in Antigua just for me and my CEO extraordinaire: "NO CHILDREN ALLOWED" ? I mean!!!

I'm still the ultimate volunteer working sixty hours a week with the Red Cross, forty with the Junior League, twenty with DAR, a dozen plus with the Historical Society and a few hours here and there with the Garden Club while I work twenty four / eight running my burgeoning real estate business. There just aren't enough hours in a week..

Well that's enough of that? I mean that!

Have a wonderful and Joyous Holiday and tell us what your family is up to.

Gallery Coffeehouse Switches to Mountain Central Time

Story filed by Carlotta Gall

When I first arrived in Whoville from Manhattan I had one thought in what was left of my New York state of mind, relax. My first assignment with the Bullsheet was to write a feature article on a subject of my choice. I was stumped for a story until I discovered the a sign in the Gallery Coffeehouse window.

The sign said "Beginning sometime in March we will open and close on Mountain Central Time." I stepped inside and a big man with a flowing white beard asked me if I needed directions or I just stopped by to hold the baby."

I had to pinch myself. Am I in a java joint that doesn't even care if I buy anything and is that a picture of Dick Cheney in drag on the wall?

The next thing I knew a young woman appeared out of nowhere, introduced the bearded man as George, grabbed the baby, hollered to an elderly woman crawling out the door toward the sidewalk, threw a hand full of beans into the espresso machine, pulled a two pound blueberry muffin from a little wicker basket, handed it to man in a long blond wig and said "You can pay me Tuesday or Friday or just take it and run, turned to me and said, hi I'm Wendy, can you FRIGGIN believe we own this place?

At this point I had a lot of questions. I thought I'd start with the sign in the window.

When I asked Wendy Dylan co-owner of the Gallery Coffeehouse about the sign this is what she had to say. "I used to date this band. I mean I lived with them. Well I actually only dated the rhythm guitarist and the lead singer. I should clarify that the rhythm guitarist was also the lead singer. I started dating him after I went with the base player on and off for a while. I was very fond of the horn section too but we were just friends.

Anyway after we broke up, I mean after the band broke up, the lead guitarist moved to Colorado. And it used drive me crazy, because I really missed him the most. He was like a really cute brother to me. I loved talking to him on the phone even after he moved but the downside was that I had to wait an hour in the morning or stay up late at night to talk to him because he was on Mountain Central Time.

Then I realized how lucky he was because he had that extra hour everyday. That means people in Colorado have one times 365 extra hours a year and the people in Los Angeles have 3 extra hours a day times 365 which is a calculator number for sure.

Just think it's 1395 hours earlier every year in L.A. no wonder everyone in California looks so young {George did the math in his head} gorgeous George , A.K.A. garrulous George, is one of my favorite customers. He's kind of a Special Forces Santa Claus with a PHD. He's very good with numbers and he knows a lot about something he calls retail.

Where was I? Oh! So George has been telling me for months that the "flexible coffee house hours are bad for business." He said, "retail is about consistency." I think Thomas Jefferson said that. George is always quoting famous people. Anyway George has a lot of good ideas and an amazing amount of opinions.

George suggested I start putting the coffeehouse on Mountain Central Time, that way if I was supposed to open the shop by 8:00 in the morning and I didn't open till 8:30 or quarter to nine I'd still be early and the people who used to complain that we shouldn't close at noon would be happy because now we would be open until o'clock Eastern Standard time unless I get in after nine and then I'd stay open a little longer to make up the difference. Would you like a latte mocha? It's on the house."

Whoville Deputy Sheriff Issues First DUI CPC Citation

By Wanda Aimlessly

Deputy Sheriff Mike Sherif issued Whoville's first traffic citation for reckless driving while using a cell phone. Sheriff Sherif said driving under the influence of a cell phone conversation can result in heavy fines. He cited local real estate agent Monica Cappuccino for that very offense this week. Sheriff Sherif told the Bullsheet Ms. Cappuccino was apparently talking with her husband about what to have for dinner when she rear ended one hundred seven year old June May of Brenda. Ms.Cappuccino said she and her husband were trying to decide between fish or fowl and red wine or white for dinner at the time the accident occurred. When I asked about the citation Ms. Cappuccino said," Thanks to the exorbitant amount of this fine, we'll have to settle for Top Ramen and a two liter bottle of Orange Crush tonight.

"Starbusts" Introduces Variable Breast Implants

By Belinda Backbiter

A Silicon Valley California couple has struck gold despite High Tech Companies' sagging sales.

Ed Sizemore president and CEO of Starbusts says the market for his variable breast implants is robust and growing by leaps and bounds. Tina Sizemore echoed her husband's sentiments "the demand for breasts that can be enlarged or reduced easily is exploding."

"I was a personal trainer to female, film and recording industry stars in L.A. for years. As a fitness trainer and aerobics teacher I worked with women who wanted their bodies to look great but they didn't want their exercise programs to be a hassle. A lot of my clients complained that their larger than normal silicon breast interfered with a good workout. "The darn things just get in the way." Ironically other clients who succeeded in achieving their perfect body image complete with "washboard abs" often wound up with a washboard chest too. Yuck!!!

That's when my husband Ed, a former party balloon designer, hit on the idea of the inflatable variable breast. It works on a very simple principle. A fiber thin tube is inserted into a tiny valve under each breast. A lightweight hand held compressor gradually pumps a steady stream of helium through the tube enlarging the breast. A simple flick of the valve gradually deflates the inflated bust. Voila you can go from Pamela Sue Anderson to Celine Dion in seconds.

Sport's Illustrated swimsuit model Melanie Tangent had this to say about the "Starbust". I want them small when I'm working out or jogging or just hanging out around the house. I want them like headlights on a Fifty-Six Buick Special when I'm modeling and once in awhile I want to remember what it was like to be a skinny little flat chested kid with freckles. The Starbust enables me to have the breasts to fit any mood or occasion.

Stand up comedienne Rhonda Mupp has seen her career soar since she started using the Starbust. I prefer pert little breasts when I'm not working. But when I'm on the comedy circuit I make one super big and the other one super teeny. The moment I walk on stage I know I'm gonna get laughs.

Tina Sizemore promised to keep the Bullsheet abreast of Starbust's progress. When we asked her how the Starbust product line was fairing in the volatile global economy she said, "We are probably the only company in the world that is happy to be going bust."
